It's a fair concern, but the big boys are setting up nuclear power stations to make sure they can power their own shit. High energy consumption doesn't have to mean high CO2 emissions.

Long term I would like to think AI will pay itself off in aiding the development of more efficient production and storage. That said, for funsies I like to generate ridiculously large prime numbers across various AI platforms until I hit usage limits xx

Wait till you read how many GPUs they use to train AI in general.
