

To the people asking to not use AI because of the carbon footprint...

Surely there's better ways to go about it than pestering everyone and probably convincing them to do it out of spite...?

Yeah... I can have ChatGPT complete work in 5 seconds that take 2 days for a lazy worker to complete. How much carbon footprint would that employee create for eating, drinking, breathing, and using his laptop at work for reddit?

As long as the worker isn't being killed while substituted for ChatGPT, I don't see this as a compelling argument.

Good point! Maybe we should start to "layoff" workers who aren't being productive! Let's start from me who is still using reddit after 12 hours of "work"!

In other words, shut up.
