

ChatGPT sure uses a lot of energy! ⚡👁👁

Posted by u/Budget-Grade3391 • 0 points • 3 comments

ChatGPT uses up to 25 times the energy of a Google search (about 3 Wh per prompt). Sounds bad, right? Sure, it's definitely an issue, but let's put it into perspective: The average American uses 886 kWh per month. That's the equivalent of 300,000+ prompts per American per month!

If you're protesting AI because of its climate impact, but also regularly doing laundry, streaming netflix, driving your car, ordering amazon packages, eating beef, online gaming, wasting food, or even worse taking leisurely international flights, then check yourself.

I sincerely applaud those who make an intentional effort to reduce our eliminate their consumption on the items above, but I can't stand by while hypocrisy blocks the innovations we need to solve the climate issues caused by excessive lifestyles.

Lately I've been seeing this comparison between chatgpt search and Google cropping up a lot in comments and in articles

It's so bad they ridicule people for saying thank you to ChatGPT because it wastes energy lol
