

r/DefendingAIArt

Interesting video on the environmental impact of AI

Posted by u/CyanideJack • • 0 points • 2 comments

A pretty comprehensive video essay on the environmental impact of using AI. Thought it might generate some interesting discussion.

<https://youtu.be/5sFBySzNIX0>

Comments

u/LengthyLegato114514 • 4 points • 2025-04-02 13:55 UTC

It's pretty good that it talks about the impact of the technology, but it's not like the GPU farms use special minerals and materials supercomputers didn't use before generative AI

Because quite frankly every tiime someone brings up the "environment" and it's about "muh carbon" it's so obvious it's just the same hoax every time

u/CyanideJack • 1 points • 2025-04-02 14:00 UTC

I mean I think that's a simplistic take on the video. It covers a lot more than just the materials used to create the hardware. He also covers things like the potential benefits and even the difference between using AI for illustrations vs using conventional hardware.