

Stop using the environment as a virtue signal for AI hate

Posted by u/GrabsGarb • 0 points • 82 comments

My biggest pet peeve in this debate is when people who are against AI use in art use “it’s bad for the environment” as one of their points. I’m sorry but if you consume meat or fast fashion products you have absolutely no right to micromanage other people’s environmental footprints. I will happily hear out other points, but pretending your main concern is environmental impact is straight bull.

Comments

u/Appropriate-Shoe-545 • 1 points • 2025-04-22 04:38 UTC

I think you make a good point that other facets of modern life have some environmental costs. However while meat and clothes meet some nutritional and social needs especially if you're poor, I wonder what need is there in using a very specific type of machine learning algorithm other than instant gratification that can't be met by other methods for a lower environmental cost.

u/Cautious_Repair3503 • -1 points • 2025-04-19 08:58 UTC

That argument is nonsense op. It's a fallacy to say "you cannot say X is bad when you do y which is bad". The colloquial name for it is whataboutery. Also you don't know if they consume fast fashion or meat anyway....

Even if I owned a company that destroys rainforests it would still not make me wrong when I point out that fossil fuels contribute to climate change.

u/GrabsGarb • 1 points • 2025-04-20 22:05 UTC its absolutely hypocritical. & you're missing the point. AI is less harmful for the environment than watching TV. So again, using the environment in this argument is absolutely virtue signaling

u/Cautious_Repair3503 • 1 points • 2025-04-20 22:21 UTC

both harm the environment. therefore if one wants to reduce damage to the environment, ceasing to do one, or both is a valid choice, yes? now we can argue that one might want to do both, but conserving the environment would be a valid reason to refrain from one, if one does not want to refrain from both.

saying "thing y that you do also hurts the environment" is irrelevant to if thing x does. if both x and y hurt the environment, and you want to reduce harm to the environment maximally, you would stop doing both x and y, however few people want to optimize for that at the expense of everything else, so it makes sence to simply stop one rather than both. this is not an unreasonable choice.

u/SchemeShoddy4528 • 0 points • 2025-04-18 03:28 UTC

So you just did something called “what aboutism”. Let he with no sin cast the first stone. We need food we don’t need computers which rip off art and create shitty poems.

u/Familiar-Art-6233 • 1 points • 2025-04-20 15:10 UTC

And yet here you are on Reddit

u/SchemeShoddy4528 • 0 points • 2025-04-20 21:40 UTC

I’ll forgive your ignorance on the amount of electricity required for ai and crypto.

u/Familiar-Art-6233 • 1 points • 2025-04-20 22:23 UTC

I can run image generation on my phone or gaming laptop.

I think you’re grossly overestimating

u/SchemeShoddy4528 • 1 points • 2025-04-20 23:20 UTC

Which one?

u/Familiar-Art-6233 • 1 points • 2025-04-20 23:41 UTC

My laptop can run Hidream, which is the largest local model around these days.

My phone can also run Flux which was the previous premier model

u/Jrc2099 • 1 points • 2025-04-17 00:02 UTC

Stop using accessibility as an excuse.