

Is chatGPT really bad for the environment? (Genuine question- I'm not well informed)

Not fishing for fights, I've seen it written here and there but I don't really understand it/ why.

These people know whats up:

See this graphic:

Simply youtube, reddit, facebook, azure, AWS etc all use a whole lot more energy, and cryptt uses a lot of energy, and in the future regular data centres will still use a whole lot more energy than AI.

So if you are really, really worried about data centre energy use, you should call for FB to be shut down, and that would probably be a good thing.

And prnhub also.

Thanks for taking the time to send these over. I'll have a look through them! :)

Energy consumption. Just like every AI consumes energy, posting on reddit, brewing coffee, and turning on a light bulb.

Don't forget to thank the chat!

I mean... I understand that- but is it like an exorbitant amount of energy compared to how the internet works? I don't really understand how/ why it's different to websites for example

To be honest: AI is very energy heavy. Very.
