

AI is "destroying the earth"? Call them out on it! Some of them literally enjoy exhibitionist suffer porn LARPing. They'll claim they themselves don't use electricity, eat meat, or drink water.

You can make them admit to clown town behavior. (All the while they're probably on their iPhones and listening to their AirPods.)

Also pro-tip: they hate being called fascists. They cannot comprehend that their censorship, oppression, and occasional calls for violence are literally from the fascist playbook. It drives them crazy and makes their minds explode when you tell them they're the evil oppressors.

The Earth has had periods when it had magma rivers covered by thunderstorms, when it was almost completely frozen, and when it was mostly forest. Millions of species have gone extinct before us, and more will follow. The Earth will be fine with or without us.

Ironically, the more impactful reason to care about the environment is human selfishness. We need certain conditions to live comfortably here; we don't want planetary conditions to change too much for our sake.

u/ShepherdessAnne • 2 points • 2025-05-30 14:19 UTC

That person sounds like a bot tbh. Remember most of the environmental arguments are just astroturf.

u/Salt_Alternative_86 • 3 points • 2025-05-30 04:01 UTC

Honestly, what are they even arguing for? I think they're just control freaks obsessed with regulating other people's lives for the power trip it gives them... Which only inspires me to replace them more quickly with machines that aren't complete cunts about literally everything. Let them scream about the AI, how meat is murder, how muh environment is collapsing... I just tune them out and mass generate content that is infinitely more interesting than their whining ever could be.

I guarantee you, at least half of antis own cars - and those are like one of the main pollution sources in the world.

This is a response worthy from r/quityourbullshit.

Let's assume that, even with this minimalist life of unrealistic standards, he at least has access to the internet. If his moral compass were that rigid, he would basically be against even posting in this site, [since it has a partnership with OpenAI to use the content generated here to feed AIs] (<https://www.cnbc.com/2024/05/16/reddit-soars-after-announcing-openai-deal-on-ai-training-models.html>).

Or that person is a big fat liar, or a hypocrite.

You see, all they have to do is exclude all the things their parents provide for them. They aren't a consumer, they just share what their consumer parents buy.

u/Mikhael_Love • 7 points • 2025-05-30 01:55 UTC

That's solid.

u/mikiencolor • 10 points • 2025-05-29 23:57 UTC

True story. They access Reddit through kale-driven psychic powers.

I've generated thousands of images offline using an RTX3060 and I haven't had to give it any water yet, what am I doing wrong?

u/FaceDeer • 2 points • 2025-05-30 04:46 UTC

Try pouring some water into your GPU anyway, I bet it'll make better pictures that way.

u/Mikhael_Love • 6 points • 2025-05-30 01:52 UTC

I just did a count of my output folder. 76,467. Haven't added drop.

Note: okay, so someone is probably going to come along with some smartass remark like "That's a lot of porn" or something. So, I'll get ahead of that and say, "Yes. Yes it is."

u/SpotBeforeSleeping • 6 points • 2025-05-30 03:36 UTC

> quietly stares at folder almost reaching 900k

u/capecod091 • 2 points • 2025-05-30 12:36 UTC

you have to clean that one day, don't you? that'd be like 10gb of images at least, maybe 30gb, i'm not sure.

u/SpotBeforeSleeping • 1 points • 2025-05-30 20:38 UTC

200GB+ with 95% compressed jpegs.

There's a good chance I've only seen less than 50% of the pictures. Half of it was made with the new 3060 I got 4 months ago.

u/Quick-Window8125 • 15 points • 2025-05-30 00:23 UTC

Antis used Screech!

It's not very effective...

u/Quick-Window8125 • 16 points • 2025-05-29 23:47 UTC

If the AI industry really used that much water and energy for inference than the world would be dry as hell by now 400 million registered people in ChatGPT alone, and that's not talking about users on sites like character AI or similar.

u/Amethystea • 12 points • 2025-05-29 23:46 UTC

You are supposed to drink near a gallon of water per day. Generating about 20 images uses around 19oz of water... this person would not likely survive on less than 1oz of water per day.

This troll is lying, there's no way. They aren't a 'consumer' that has 'disposable technology' yet somehow can use the internet from home?

Wow this guy is so perfect. A modern day saint and we are unworthy of even basking in his presence.

u/ChannelHub • 14 points • 2025-05-29 23:46 UTC

I'm a vegan who hasn't owned the car in years. How many AI credits is that worth? Lol

u/redddittsucks • 6 points • 2025-05-30 06:18 UTC

You are still not allowed to generate AI images because it's either all or nothing. Go live in a cave.
