So should we get rid of electricity? It's bad for the environment.

Right, that's the point. That's why the environment argument is bullshit unless it's to brainstorm ways to make ai more efficient.

I'm pro AI, and broadly agree that many people using the environmental argument are being hypocrites, but I wouldn't say it's completely bs.

AI does, and will use a lot of energy. The investment going into building new centers for AI is huge, and the combined training and inference energy requirements are significant.

I'd personally be happy to see some regulation around data centers that required them to use green energy, nuclear, etc. I think AI will have a huge positive impact, but ignoring the environmental impact isn't going to be helpful.

Yes, apple sucks and you must ensure you have a sustainable phone you can use for many years and repair, but, this is a rudimentary argumentation manipulation technique, just because theres two things that are bad, or one thing that is worse does not mean that attention should not be brought to both.

You are missing the point, and intact, I'd argue your paragraph is manipulation. Where did I say attention shouldn't be brought to both? I said people are so caught up with ai damaging the environment, but completely ignoring the phone, we use are built off of the backs of child labor and cause pollution also. People always bring up the effort argument, not thinking that ai could be used to one day mine, our minerals. Saying we shouldn't use ai because of the environment is nonsense.

The video is so short that theres alot of room for interpretation.

Exactly! That's like saying flying isn't bad for the environment because cars are also bad for Today I learned that pro AI people don't use phones because they care about cobalt.
