

r/vegan

Meat eaters arguing that ChatGPT is bad for the environment

Posted by u/Peepssheep • 0 points • 84 comments

I'm not making this post to argue whether using ChatGPT is ethical or not (personally, I think using it to make art is unethical). But since it's a hot topic right now, I just want to point out the hypocrisy I keep seeing: people who eat meat criticizing others for using ChatGPT because "it's servers bad for the environment" and then make excuses for eating meat products.

Like... really?

You're supporting one of the most environmentally destructive industries on the planet. One that kills innocent animals, contributes heavily to deforestation, methane emissions, and water overuse, but you're drawing the line at AI servers?

And then these same people say things like, "We need to cut back wherever we can," as if using ChatGPT even comes close to the environmental impact of animal agriculture. The comparison isn't even in the same league 🤔😏

Comments

u/Shark1753 • 1 points • 2025-10-14 04:21 UTC

Tbh I think the whole ChatGPT argument is bad is true, but I think there's much worse things. Lowkey I eat meat, but I honestly think this makes me wanna eat less meat due to the waste.

u/Aggressive_Rent_7128 • 1 points • 2025-10-08 23:34 UTC

Fucking thank you I've been thinking this.

u/[deleted] • 1 points • 2025-06-25 13:18 UTC

[removed]

u/CrossXFir3 • 1 points • 2025-06-23 14:55 UTC

You can't be serious right now, are you? Just because one thing is also bad, doesn't mean that you can't talk about a different thing. You know that right? Both are very harmful for the planet. And like, being vegan is the morally superior stance. But one of these things is about eating food that we've evolutionarily been eating for the entirety of the species, the other is making stuff a little quicker and easier for you. Expecting people to change from eating animal products, something they've done since birth and something they're hardwired to enjoy. Something that is so pervasive in our society is a lot more of a change and commitment than not using AI because it's harmful for the planet. Like seriously? And again, obviously it's morally superior to be vegan, but this is some wild reasoning.

Next you're gonna say that people shouldn't care about recycling because really it's more about what corporations do that harm the environment many times more than personal waste.

u/Peepssheep • 1 points • 2025-06-23 19:21 UTC

Read my edit. My issue is with CERTAIN people (NOT ALL MEAT EATERS) saying AI is bad for the environment, but justifying eating meat. Two things can be true at once. ChatGPT can have an environmental impact and the meat industry can be far worse. But if someone only calls out one and defends the other, that's inconsistency, and that's the issue I'm pointing out. It's like preaching about saving endangered animals while wearing an elephant skin leather coat.

u/xshmokeyb • 1 points • 2025-06-23 08:15 UTC

There's not an excuse for eating meat its natural wether people like it or not.

u/Mediocre_Brief_7088 • 1 points • 2025-06-23 01:33 UTC

We all have to eat. Not everyone wants AI pictures.

u/Peepssheep • 1 points • 2025-06-23 03:38 UTC

That's like wearing an elephant leather coat and preaching about saving endangered animals then saying "we all have to wear clothes"

u/NASAFan89 • 1 points • 2025-06-20 07:58 UTC

"We need to cut back wherever we can" ... unless it means not getting to satisfy our gluttony with fattening animal products.

u/Stock_Yam9061 • 1 points • 2025-06-20 02:26 UTC

So ridiculous