

[Request] Is this AI water consumption math true?

Posted by u/WanderWut • • 0 points • 56 comments

Because if it's even remotely true then there is a ton of misinformation going around. Almost all of the discourse I see online makes it seem as though AI is so unprecedented in its water consumption that it will lead to the Earth's water supply drying up.

Link to post: <https://www.reddit.com/r/aiwars/s/1svZ9mVDIA>

Comments

u/[deleted] • 1 points • 2026-01-16 07:19 UTC

[removed]

u/[deleted] • 1 points • 2025-12-23 07:26 UTC

[removed]

u/Star_Gazer04 • 1 points • 2025-11-10 14:38 UTC

We won't have any water.. government took 25 Trillion dollars of our taxes to build an under ground infrastructure under the ocean floor ment only for government and you guessed it.. the wealthy.. so with no water soon and with everything else hitting the fan we all get screwed while the greedy bastards that caused this gets to escape and get away with stealing our money. What an awful time to be alive. This is very depressing. We can't even try to enjoy life since prices are so extremely high then the grubby politicians need us to pay more taxes yet allow corporations to pay us such low wages/ salaries and it's such a slap in the face for how long and how hard we've worked and just to suffer and get no relief yet now there are trillionaires ... this is very sick. This isn't sustainable and the government is showing just how bad it's lacking a critical thinking skills or the ability to have any logic at all. I can't believe how many animals they completely wipe out for their poison data centers. I'm so sad. I thought we all had an equal chance at growing up and getting amazing wages so we can afford to save and have emergency funds and kids funds and buy a house take vacations after all the bills and putting away a good amount into different savings accounts and get all caught up on basic essentials and fix vehicle then we would still have a big chunk left over! I mean what happened? Who allowed it to get this bad? It's not fair and not right. How are all the restrictions and strict laws on us yet the wealthy and government have absolutely nothing to follow.. I'm so confessed

I'm sorry for my rant.

u/ForsakenComparison4 • 1 points • 2025-10-30 14:04 UTC

That's interesting.

I just asked ai about the water consumption. In its opinion the water used to generate electricity doesn't count (but often gets added to the sum) but the actual number is 1.1-1.7 trillion gallons per year globally. Which looks like it synchs up with the op?

u/IEatFlamingos • 1 points • 2026-03-23 14:01 UTC

Bro thinks ai has an opinion