

From a random AI sub... Environmental Impact is real folks!

Posted by u/Indescribable_Theory • 0 points • 5 comments

Data Centers or server farms used for social media IS AN ISSUE. It's been an issue for over 15 years after Facebook started bloating.

Both things are true and yet here's the side that just refuses to accept responsibility.

AI Data Centers, and even mass server farms need immediate regulation and downsizing.

Comments

u/Kiiaru • 2 points • 2025-09-16 19:54 UTC

The AI users are on both. It doesn't take a rocket appliance to figure out that more electricity usage means more emissions. There is nobody, not a soul, who is using AI without using social media.

This just like the Bitcoin mining people who said their power usage is good for the power grid because they are using up waste power. Which would make sense, if the Bitcoin miners turned their rigs off when power was at peak demand. Instead... Bitcoin mines, JUST LIKE AI DATACENTERS, are commercial customers and treated as part of the baseload. So your town gets the rolling blackouts while the datacenters experience no interruption because they're providing a service...

u/Fuzzy_Association960 • 3 points • 2025-09-16 11:08 UTC their idea of environmental scall or, scall in general seem to be none existing 🤔

u/BrocoliCosmique • 13 points • 2025-09-16 10:39 UTC

"AI is not an issue, wake me up when big corpo stops their mega factories"

Hmm ok dude, who do you think owns the AI mega-datacenters ?

u/bolitboy2 • 2 points • 2025-09-16 11:22 UTC

"Clearly it belong to the artists, Why else would their art be found within those data centers" - what their response would be

You underestimate their ability to just straight up ignore the facts

u/Low_Interaction_577 • 6 points • 2025-09-16 10:07 UTC

Oh the irony.....