

Do AI bro's even like the Environment?

Posted by u/atlasfrompaladins • 0 points • 23 comments

I saw a post a few hours ago in the Anti AI sub, you know the one. And out of all the comments I was reading through 1 comment that the OP responded to made me wanna make this. He said something along of the lines of "Do pro's even care about the environment?*" They do, we do, it's just not everyone is eco friendly and using recyclable materials or ridding electrical bikes ya know?

Not saying we shouldn't try to lessen the effects of by products and what not, it's just that... Telling people to go fuck themselves, in a post will not make them pro human, or pro environmental or whatever. Insulting people is not gonna make them switch sides.

Like how would the OP feel if I called his mother a whore for not using AI... Would that make him, or his mother more practical to use it? Would it?

the main concern is water consumption, AI consumes 1L for 10-100 prompts, a single burger is estimated at 2500L, when it comes to energy AI + CLOUD which no one talks about anymore are together 0.5% of the power grid, nothing compared to other industries including crypto, where was this environmentalist energy during the crypto craze? AI is infinitely more useful than crypto

that is not what a data center looks like

I have chipmunks that keep trying to tunnel under my house. Is there a way we can make AI that just ruins that one specific part of the environment? Like maybe AI that runs on chipmunks?

u/TakinYoJobs • 1 points • 2025-10-25 03:09 UTC

You mean like hamster wheels but for chipmunks?

u/LatterMusic8265 • 2 points • 2025-10-25 02:51 UTC

I bet OP is against nuclear power

As an AI bro, I love mother nature.

Do antis care about the environment?

If yes

Why are they on reddit?

Why aren't they all vegans?

Why do they have cars?

We should all care about environment. I'm not saying wanton usage of AI is great. But I'm tired of antis making AI the be all and end all of environmental concerns when it's significantly lower in environmental impact compared to so many other common human usages. It's not the gotcha they think it is

I'm pro ai and am plant based for the environment. To exist in society in the developed world where we all carry computers in our pockets and use electricity and manmade objects and buy food from stores it's impossible to do no environmental harm.... But every individual can look at their own footprint and reduce it as best as they reasonably can, doing things to minimize and offset their personal impact. I use what I find value in and reduce my consumption of other things I don't.

And that's great! That's a way better representation of the "yet I participate in society" meme. You're acknowledging your own unavoidable participation in society and acknowledging the costs of that while trying to better yourself, not going around harrassing others for perceived flaws while you yourself do similar shit elsewhere.

One can criticize the flaws of society while participating in it, but the moment one starts throwing stones at other people they better make sure they don't live in a glass house

What is veganism doing in this discussion?

u/Stormydaycoffee • 1 points • 2025-10-25 07:25 UTC

AI's environmental impact is tiny compared to livestock and dairy industry

u/Fatcat-hatbat • 3 points • 2025-10-25 04:19 UTC

This is when an anti posts that cringe "we live in a society" meme.

Oblivious to the fact you can live in a society and

- 1) not use reddit
- 2) be a vegan
- 3) not drive a car.

Yeah the classic yEt yOu pArtlclpATe in sOcLeTY

That's why I specifically listed examples that are none necessities in life.

What they are doing is more like criticising people for eating beef, while they eat pork.
Thats not what the meme is about at all, that's just hypocrisy

u/AccomplishedNovel6 • -2 points • 2025-10-25 02:20 UTC

I don't really like the environment, beyond the ways that it mechanically benefits me. If you made a box that spits out everything it makes, I'd like that just as much

u/Purple_Food_9262 • -2 points • 2025-10-25 02:50 UTC

Agreed. This general environmental awareness guilt people have is just marketing bullshit that taps into people's narcissism. People simply refuse to engage with it in any logical way and nag everyone else constantly, it's so fucking annoying.

u/07238 • 0 points • 2025-10-25 11:21 UTC

Do you like existing? If we didn't have an environment with functioning ecosystems you wouldn't exist and literally no life would exist...

u/Purple_Food_9262 • 1 points • 2025-10-25 14:01 UTC

Exactly, hyperbole is how it usually works.

> Like how would the OP feel if I called his mother a whore for not using AI

Just to be clear, that kind of school-yard taunt would amuse me to no end if it were directed at me. It's basically a concession of any rational points someone was trying to make.

> Not saying we shouldn't try to lessen the effects of by products and what not, it's just that... Telling people to go fuck themselves, in a post will not make them pro human, or pro environmental or whatever. Insulting people is not gonna make them switch sides.

The goal of moral panics like anti-AI is not to get anyone to "switch sides". Arguably that would be the worst possible outcome. There is no goal other than demonstrating that you are more morally pure than the next guy, in an ever-increasing cycle of fanaticism.

The whole water argument is completely voided if you just take into account how inoften computer nerds shower

u/Radiant_Ear_3470 • 2 points • 2025-10-25 02:28 UTC

perfectly balanced, as all things should be
