

r/artificial

Will we see a rise in birth defects from data center pollution similar to China's issue with pollution?

Posted by u/justsomeguy864 • • 0 points • 0 comments

Data centers can release the same kinds of pollutants (volatile organic compounds) that led to it an increase of birth defects in China. Article links air pollution to birth defects in China. Skimming Google scholar shows many other articles with similar topics, some of which also cover infertility and general adverse health effects associated with air pollution and VOCs.

What are people's thoughts on this? Can the adverse effects be avoided? What kind of laws we need to go into place to offset the environmental/health impacts of data centers?

Comments