

AI and water

What if the whole AI water consumption thing is just a pretext for the richest to steal water and have it at their disposal (as always)?

Openly speak about reducing the population.

Proceed to buy farmland during covid

Redirect water for AI.

The plan's coming together.

Thanks for bringing this up. Lithium in water is horrible! These tech guys really need to get this figured out. It's not just out drinking water but our food as well. I really don't care if you can filter/RO, ionazate the shit out of it, I don't want it intentionally in the water. Period.

Data centers remind me of EVs. It's as if the tech industry and governments didn't fully think things through. Which isn't surprising, but some of these narratives rival fantasy. I just don't get how one person involved in all this, can't stand up and say this is stupidity.

"You can always count on the Americans to do the right thing—after they have exhausted all the other possibilities." - usually attributed to Winston Churchill.

I think they are just stupid

They really don't understand how much of an ecological disaster they are going to create following this path, or that's why they think they need less people on earth

It's short sighted and selfish
