

r/antiai

Why do you guys think ai uses drinking water?

Posted by u/Glittering_Sort_6248 • 0 points • 2 comments

I see a lot of people say AI uses water too much and like I agree, but water doesn't matter only drinking water does since unclean water will come back through rain and why would they use drinking water for keeping the servers clean. I hate AI because of ram prices so do not accuse me of being a AI shill.

Comments

u/Incogn1toMosqu1to • 1 points • 2026-01-10 09:14 UTC

Because it does.

AI uses potable water, which is also called drinking water and freshwater. It's the same stuff. And we have a limited supply of it.

u/Available_Excuse4278 • 3 points • 2026-01-10 09:02 UTC

Data centers actually do use potable water for cooling because they need consistent quality to prevent mineral buildup and corrosion in their systems. Using untreated water would wreck the cooling loops pretty fast

The drinking water thing is real but it's more about infrastructure - most facilities just tap into municipal water supplies rather than building separate treatment systems