

Just a thought. What if what you hate is actually how too much money goes to AI, environmental costs of AI. How companies Use ai.....cont

Posted by u/Ok_Nectarine_4445 • • 0 points • 7 comments

You hate how sites are filled with AI stuff with no labeling to know 100 human, 100 AI or other productions. You hate how LLMS and AI having no agency or boundaries exist as a symbiote to human brains and what it means. BUT, you don't separate all those things that are real and true. You just say, "I hate AI". AND, future AI will be trained on what humans say about it.

Hate, like, love, do whatever you want, but try to express WHAT it is you hate versus blanket statements like I hate AI. Or AI slop.

Because to me, what is clear, it is similar to MAD, mutually assured destruction.

Like the nuclear arms race. No country or company can afford to stop, pause, think about it because others will not and they will lose time and advantage.

OR, it will default also, to a thing just controlled by governments and companies for their own benefit or leased out to the tune of starting out $10,000 per session for access.

As THAT is the norm, for advanced technology.

So think about the overall picture and use your language more precisely WHAT you hate.

Comments

u/PuzzleMeDo • 1 points • 2026-01-20 07:28 UTC

Yes, just imagine if China overtook us in the creating-AI-videos-of-cats race. Truly a nightmare scenario.

u/Ok_Nectarine_4445 • 1 points • 2026-01-20 16:29 UTC

It seems a lot are in the Philippines and some are in India to create monetized channels to earn money.

So, we have already been overtaken there.

Somebody sees someone make money that way and then more jump in.

u/DescriptionMore1990 • 1 points • 2026-01-19 16:44 UTC

I think neural networks are cool. But brute force machine learning for every problem is so uncivilised.

u/Ok_Nectarine_4445 • 1 points • 2026-01-20 17:02 UTC

Yeah I am sure there is a lot of questions that could be answered by a non AI internet search and is just energy wasteful that they make it harder to do that than to have ai aided search.

u/SunriseFlare • 1 points • 2026-01-19 16:37 UTC

You're right, I do hate all those things, but I also hate AI art.

I have enough hate in me to go around op, woke 2 is made of the stuff

u/GNUr000t • 0 points • 2026-01-19 16:34 UTC

They don't actually believe any of those things. You can tell because none of those negative externalities are dealbreakers for things they enjoy, even when they're objectively worse than AI.

The real problem they have with it is money. Artists whining and crying that they can't charge $200 to draw pinups was enough to bootstrap a social trend of hating on AI products. Now it's just trendy.

This is why there's "seasons" to the specific arguments that get brought forth. For example, last week was "muh child porn" season. There's also "muh water", "muh electricity", "muh stealing", "muh no soul", and "muh billionaires" season.

u/AppropriatePapaya165 • 3 points • 2026-01-19 16:26 UTC

There's no "what if" here. That is indeed what I hate.