

I saw a vid about markiplier's stance about ai, like how it takes water is bad and how stealing from others is but also how Ai can be a good thing along with how it can help us and well I agree with what he said ai can be a good tool (like "good ai" thing he showed) but what do y'all think?

(Btw I just want to state I'm not an ai pro/bro or an anti I'm more natural in the whole ai thing)

AI has literally led to the deaths of a handful of people. That doesn't get brought up often enough.

I mean a lot of things kill people and yet are used like cars, Planes, etc but when has this happened? Do you have any sources because if so then yeah this should be brought up more

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Deaths_linked_to_chatbots

If you aren't satisfied with a wiki link, use the references listed at the bottom to read the original studies.

Dang thanks for actually giving me a source and not being rude about it (it sucks that I expect that from people online but it is the internet)

My own problem has always been with the hype and the "better than a human" narrative.

It's a tool that if we used properly is useful. The problem is the anti-human and similar sentiments people espouse.

In my opinion the issues isn't ai itself it's more of the people who use it

I think ai is good because theyve used it to find like cancer cells or something like that. Ai should be strictly limited to research purposes only to help not for stupid ai slop. 🙄🙄🙄

Well we all know how iron lungs graphics were done based on that u/BagOld5057 • 2 points • 2026-01-21 17:56 UTC

He has staunchly been against gen-AI for years now, he rendered a large part of it himself and set up his own render farm for the purpose of personally creating graphics effects. Hell, he interned with Corridor Digital just to get even better at doing the graphics himself.

Shocker, a pro-AI troll has no clue wtf they're talking about.

when the bad outweighs the good should it even matter

u/FiberglassFlowers • 2 points • 2026-01-21 12:40 UTC

Real, its just really hard to think of the bright side when the cons outweighs the pros. It can be good but people just dont use it right. It isnt msde right either. I had a friend who learned how to code with the help from ai thats good. Im still skeptical when people use ai art for their presentations.

Some people who become AI artists I swear they only do it because its easy now. Itll be like that for more things in the future thats for sure.

Everything is just going down not just that ram economy bullshit but even learning amd every aspect of our lives.

I don't think the good AI can bring outweighs the bad so no, I don't agree with any take that doesn't result in an AI ban

u/No-Tip-7471 • 2 points • 2026-01-21 23:31 UTC

What if u ban the bad AI but try to push the good AI? Like, AI regulations, etc.

u/Nightmare89344 • 2 points • 2026-01-21 12:25 UTC

I mean it depends on the ai but yeah that's fair enough obviously we don't all have to agree on everything but at least respect each others takes

u/Ok-Media8868 • 7 points • 2026-01-21 11:23 UTC

Mark's take was pretty balanced tbh. The water usage thing is legit concerning when you think about how much these models need to train, but yeah there's definitely useful applications too. I think most people here would agree the main issue is when it's used to replace human creativity without consent rather than just being a tool to help with tedious stuff

u/ReasonableCat1980 • 1 points • 2026-01-21 13:32 UTC

Do you guys think you're not using water like that here? Or on Netflix? Or when you turn YouTube on to be on while you sleep? Do you eternally online people think these are new or different brands of data centers?

u/Nightmare89344 • 1 points • 2026-01-21 11:38 UTC

(Forgot to put this in my reply) I didn't expect anyone to comment so quickly lol but it's good to know there are a lot of people who think like this to, unfortunately I am very sceptical to post on anti or pro subreddits because I don't know how some people will react like I know it's to be expected and I know not everyone will act like that but I rather be safe then sorry (also sorry for writing an entire paragraph I do write a lot when it comes to my opinions)

u/Nightmare89344 • 3 points • 2026-01-21 11:33 UTC

I wish we had more people who thought like this a lot of ai pros, bros and antis love to attack others (especially each other) I do hope in the future everyone will try and figure out a way to make ai actually more better and less wasteful instead of fighting but sadly that may be just wishful thinking, it is the internet at the end of the day

u/MilkIceLolly • 2 points • 2026-01-22 16:32 UTC

The majority of pro AI people I interact with outside of reddit are exactly like this. Myself included. These subreddits are just circle jerks for assholes.
