

"Google data centers uses more electricity/water than AI ones, so I guess neither of us can look anything up."

Paraphrased from a conversation that I just had with my dad (a man who only uses chatgpt to look stuff up.) He also said the water used in the centers isn't wasted, and when I pointed out that people who live near them have to ration their water and the centers don't have to, he said he'd never heard of that!

Meanwhile chatGPT or similar have web search builtin and often use several of them each query.

AI datacenters are not the only datacenters that create that problem for the local communities and pretending that's the case is disingenuous/wishful thinking. The world would frankly benefit if we all used the internet less.

"Because this thing is bad, adding to it doesn't hurt!" Worst whataboutism ever.

Bullshit. Get outta here with your whataboutism criticism. Yeah, yeah, it's bad, but have you heard about Super Whataboutism? (/s)

I hate this and "It's not an AI problem, it's a capitalism problem" as if AI isn't maximizing post capitalist greed over anything else

It's almost like AI is pushed by billionaire oligarchs. Wait a minute...
