

Ai isn't even that good at the moment and will require too much energy to become trustworthy.

I have no trust in the capabilities of ai, LLMs get so overwhelmed as soon as you put in any constraints. I tried to organise a months plan of food prep for lunch and dinner on the latest chatgpt and grok, it was pretty straight forward with similar meals each week but I didn't want for example meat for lunch and dinner or weirdly eggs then chicken... it feels weird eating that on the same day... I was maybe 3 constraints in and it started getting so lost, it couldn't remember or mixed up the previous constraints and confused the hell out of itself. Every table was wrong, I was being lazy and trying to save time not writing it out myself but eventually had to.

I just watched a video promoting an ai tool for electronics, with schematics, every comment is saying about how it's patently wrong and any program now is absolutely useless and not in any way a threat to any jobs.

I understand so much that this is still early days, i've seen the latest Will Smith spaghetti but just look at what it's taken to get here, the datacentres draining reservoirs and causing cancer, the price of RAM. Do further advancements come with what they've built already or do they need much more of everything, I heard Voldemort wants datacentres or whatever on satellites, is that honestly a priority for humankind

Absolutely. They are draining all of our important resources just for a " Better Ai model's that will probably write the same email and code . Our planet is dying and instead of healing it , we are just continuously destroying it for some huge companies to made for some corporate people who think they can replace humans with robots . It's not bad in conditions like cleaning sewers and all . But ai lacks emotion , even if it gained it somehow , it won't be as good as a human . I don't a bakery to be ran by a robot . I don't wanna go to a cafe that lacks it vibe . Man i wish i was born in the 2000s that was actually the golden era

Wrong, you just aren't aware of any. That's a YOU problem

Experts in some fields (software coding, physics) say LLMs have gotten VERY good recently. I expect more and more fields will see progress like this.

skill issue, use claude code or codex. they can oneshot this task quite easily. if you are typing in a chatbox on a webui and expecting results then you probably should not define that as the capabilities of ai
