

At this point the whole debate over ai feels just as pointless as the “is water wet?” debate

Posted by u/lilliancrane2 • 0 points • 34 comments

I don't think there will ever be a mutual agreement met upon a large amount of individuals. I think yall wanna argue just to argue. Both sides are escalating and both sides are hypocritical to each other. At most I feel like both antis and pros need to stay in their own spaces and mind their own business. Clearly either side doesn't welcome or tolerate the other so forcing it or arguing for it is pointless.

Comments

u/FutureMost7597 • 2 points • 2026-03-01 01:48 UTC

water is wet tho

u/lilliancrane2 • 1 points • 2026-03-01 06:15 UTC

I agree. But perhaps this isn't the best place to claim such things. What if someone disagrees?
👁👁

u/FutureMost7597 • 1 points • 2026-03-01 18:07 UTC

oh no

u/ApatheticAZO • 1 points • 2026-03-01 00:06 UTC

That's like saying the "6 or 9" argument isn't resolvable, but it is because no matter what your point of view is, only 1 side is actually correct. AI images aren't art, prompts aren't artists, AI automation makes the image, AI is cold, soulless and without intent so the images aren't art, AI cannot function without being trained, if something cannot function without the work of others, using the work of other's to make it function without permission or compensation is theft.

u/lilliancrane2 • 1 points • 2026-03-01 06:21 UTC

To be fair, as a rebuttal. I'm not claiming either side is right. I'm claiming both are hypocritical and not agreeable

u/SpiritNo6626 • 2 points • 2026-02-28 21:36 UTC

Extremism is rewarded by social media algorithms, and especially so on a place like reddit where everyone has to divide themselves into groups to decide which subreddit to post on. I have a position somewhere in between, am willing to change it and it has evolved from IRL conversations with others, but if I posted my opinion on either defendingaiart or antiai I would either get downvoted to oblivion, or I would be suffocated by a bunch of people saying 'finally, a reasonable \[opposite side\] willing to consider nuance. you're \[our side\] now. you don't have a say in this, we've decided your stance makes you a pro/anti because it's close enough'.

u/lilliancrane2 • 2 points • 2026-02-28 21:38 UTC

I really hate how in these subs neutrality is rejected. Both sides show extreme problematic behaviors and I don't think it's wrong to not want to associate with that. I think it's okay to have an opinion that's sharing both sides while not accepting it all as fact in a black/white mentality.

u/Alcain_X • 5 points • 2026-02-28 21:02 UTC

The issue is that most people have a more nuanced stance on the subject but that cant exist or spread in engagement based social media.

For instance, I can say I don't like the use of AI in entertainment roles and how I believe it will lead to near total stagnation of whatever media corporations bring it too, and I can have long discussions about how I think AI development companies should not have been allowed to scape the Internet for training data without the creators or rights holders permission's. I can rant about how dangerous it is, acting an easy and lazy cheating tool for kids and students and how I'm worrying about their development and the education sector as a whole, I can have concerns over vulnerable people developing attachments to advanced chatbots.

But am I against AI as a whole? No, it's an amazing data processing tool that can massively improve certain industries. You could use it as an adaptive traffic system to better manage congestion and transport, you could have an AI developed and trained to read financial documents to quickly and easily detect corporate fraud and tax evasion. Or an AI to actively manage power plants and distribution to better manage production and reduce costs for everyone. AI can be a fantastic tool in data driven sectors or infrastructure management.

But let's be real hardly anybody is going to read all that, all people care about saying a blanket AI = good or AI = bad, a nuanced opinion about how I think it's great for some industries and disastrous for others just won't fly.

u/lilliancrane2 • 3 points • 2026-02-28 21:03 UTC

This is the perfect take in my opinion. I think you worded that well.

u/AnarchoLiberator • 1 points • 2026-02-28 20:06 UTC

Downvoted. I would have upvoted if you had used 'Pro-AI' or 'Pros' instead of 'Ai Bros', which is a negative and loaded term.

u/ApatheticAZO • 2 points • 2026-03-01 00:09 UTC

Sure thing, Ai bro.

!gif

u/lilliancrane2 • 0 points • 2026-02-28 20:06 UTC

Okay?

u/Belisaurius555 • 1 points • 2026-02-28 19:20 UTC

Both sides-ism?

u/lilliancrane2 • 1 points • 2026-02-28 19:32 UTC

I guess? I don't say I'm anti cause idc if you use ai but I don't support the ai scams and stuff going around. Which I know that's apart of being pro ai but I see a lot of extremes from both sides. So I just don't like both

u/[deleted] • 1 points • 2026-02-28 18:51 UTC

[removed]