

AI is spurring a big expansion of high-voltage power lines. Landowners and locals are fighting back

Posted by u/talkingatoms • 0 points • 1 comments

"SUGARLOAF, Pa. (AP) — For John Zola, the 40 acres were like a paradise: apple orchards tucked into northern Pennsylvania's rolling hills, a barn, meadows and more than enough land for four houses: one for himself and his wife and each of his three adult children.

It's been "hell," however, since a contractor hired by the local power utility knocked on Zola's door in late 2024 and informed him that it planned to build a 500-kilovolt power line through his property."

Comments

u/Dry_Incident6424 • 1 points • 2026-03-08 17:21 UTC

"Rich NIMBY that owns 40 acres while most people rent demands all the rest of humanity be held back because of his fucking apple orchards."

FTFY, I say fuck this guy.