

people whose only argument against ai being "its bad for the environment" just want to feel better than others sorry guys i had to say it 🥲🥲 as someone who IS actually against generative ai....

there are so many things that cause worse environmental damage to our world but some of you people only get angry about global warming / etc whenever ai is brought up. i havent seen many people as dedicated to shititng on fossil fuels as a lot of those accounts who shit on gen ai like dont get me wrong i hate gen ai as much as the other artist but guys please some of you only care about it because you feel better about yourself when you shit on it

AI is an immerging technology, there's still time to stop it. Everything else is already here and it's much harder to get rid off. I'd also love to get rid of a ton of other things like cars, unnecessary consumer goods, meat... But those are way harder.

TRUEEE and when you point out the misinfo with ai's impact on the environment or the much larger impact from things like youtube they just completely move on to some hand-wavey argument about "soulless" art like 🤖 there's so many actual things you could criticize about the ai industry how are you fumbling this u/firegine • 2 points • 2026-03-24 23:53 UTC

Who has that as their only argument?

u/nerdybunnylover • 1 points • 2026-03-25 04:45 UTC youd be surprised how many people on tiktok can ONLY talk about the environment when it comes to ai u/GeeNah-of-the-Cs • 3 points • 2026-03-24 23:33 UTC

I don't think so.

Agreed, can we all downvote things that use THIS argument (from a mostly anti btw)

u/Farm-Alternative • 4 points • 2026-03-24 22:43 UTC

as I pro Ai I find it funny, because I have actually been to open pit mines for both coal and uranium and seen the scale of the destruction first hand. I've literally banged at their gates in anger at what they have done to this Earth.

What's funny, is none of the anti ai people that act like they care about the environment would even bother to go out and look and see for themselves. If they really cared, they would go out to the gates of these data centres and protest, ask questions of everyone involved, and spread the information from the source, not the made up shit they read on the internet.

it'd say the limiting factor is no one knowing where to go especially if you live in the suburbs

u/Farm-Alternative • 1 points • 2026-03-25 05:21 UTC

bro, I travelled over 5000kms across the Australian desert to see some of these sites, and so did hundreds of others.

that's a weak excuse, a google search will tell you where these data centres are located.

Nobody has ever said that.

You're making up people to be angry at. Shut the fuck up.

wow so youve clearly seen every possible person on the internet and just know for yourself right

u/KaleidoscopeOpen7781 • 4 points • 2026-03-24 22:33 UTC

Point to literally one example of a person championing climate change as their one and only reason for being anti AI

You made the statement. The burden of proof is on you, my dude

Otherwise eat glass

u/popsrocks2012 • 1 points • 2026-03-25 02:02 UTC

You'd be surprised by the stupidity of people.

u/SirMarkMorningStar • 1 points • 2026-03-24 21:49 UTC

Wow, I've never seen such a completely backwards take. It's the obsession with AI art that is crazy. All the actual impacts like data centers, job loss, etc. are what people should be focused on. Art will be fine.

u/nerdybunnylover • 3 points • 2026-03-24 21:53 UTC

i dont like gen ai because it steals from artists. idc if people use it, i just dont like the idea of works being unconsensually used to train something without you knowing u/Toby_Magure • 1 points • 2026-03-25 01:05 UTC

>steals from artists

No it doesn't, I hope that helps. Stop falsely accusing people of crimes and contributing to the harassment of AI users. That is libel. You are a bad person.

many social media platforms use posts to train ai, stop denying it. they make the options to opt out very confusing on purpose too, and even then when i tried to opt out for instagram i had to send in a request that i never got anything back on.

>many social media platforms use posts to train ai, stop denying it

Who denied it? Of course they do. You give them the right to sell or use the data you post on their platform when you agree to their TOS.

That's not stealing. Instagram doesn't care if you want to opt out. Your "opt out" is to delete your account.
