

"Stop using AI, it wastes water" me who uses AI locally on a PC with no water-cooling:

Local AI only uses as much water as gaming, household appliances. luddites (and even a lot of pros) only know of closed-source AI by megacorps which, yes waste water because of datacenters using a shitload of water-cooling. and even then, its nowhere near as much a lot of other industries.

if anyone wants to know of local AI models and how to run on a PC I'm more than happy to help. :) my specs are RTX 4060Ti and 64gb ram. which is just enough for SOTA video models like LTX2

Tf they all on about with the water? Anyone worrying about ai water consumption is at best ragebaiting. The energy is the issue!

Data centers are being built with closed loop water systems anyways. They can only be saying that for a few more months. Dont worry about the ignorant people who just wanna hate on something.

i have an aio in my PC but that thing is a closed loop system so it doesn't actually consume water

Water level is actually INCREASING because of global warming. And their fridge and air conditioner harms the environment more. They might argue that "but but its necessary" well our ancestors lived without fridge and air conditionar. You can be too

Local models are about to get a huge uplift too.
